Oklahoma Now a State-President Calls Conference of Governors.

There are now forty-slx states. The last act admitting Oklahoma into the Union with accomplished last Friday when the President signed the formal proclamation. The new star will, according to custom, not go onto the flug till next Fourth of July, but the new state is fully a member of the nation and her representatives will alt In Washington next winter. The governor has called the first session ef, the legislature for Dec. 2.

The President has taken up another subject which will help the whole country. He has invited all the governors of the states and territories to meet in Washington May 13, 14, and 15 of next year to discuss with him plans for preserving the natural wealth of the country. Much of the riches in timber, ore and so forth, is being used up, a great deal is being asted by carelessness and the laction will suffer for this in after years unless something is done. He plans to do something.

A new set of colus has been issued from the Treasury. The colns look better than the ones we are using now, but there has been considerable eritleisin because the legend "In thed) we trust" has been left off them. The President explains that there is to law regulring that it be put there, and that it is often made the subject off curtoons and irreverent jokes, and he believes it more religious not to have it there. Most thoughtful men will agree with him.

Several important trials began during the week. John R. Walsh of Chicago, whose banks failed last year, was put un trial accused of wrecking them, and much semational tearlmony has been given it is charged that he had a system of robbing them, by glving to himself stock in worthless companies to controlled, and then sedling it to the banks. His lawyers are trying to get him out on the ground that some of his private papers were shown to the grand jury that indicted him.

Another case was that of E. 11. Harriman, the great railroad man, who refused hat winter lo tell the luter-State Commerce Commission how It was that he and some friends got hold of millions of other people's money without giving anything for ft. The Commission has asked the courts to make him tell, and his lawyers have answered that what he concealed was not only none of anybody's business, but that if it was neither the t'ommission nor Congress could do anything about it. Many men who know about such things say that the deal was almost stealing, and this answer has made people who think the trusts are going too far pretty augry.

The murder trial of Mrs. Annle M. liradley, who ahnt and killed ex-Senator Brown of Utah In a Washington Hotel last winter because he would not marry her, began in Washington, From the attitude her lawyers took it Is likely that they will plead that she

THE THANKSGIVING SPIRIT.

Next Thursday is one of our national holidays—a day on which every member of the nation should rejoice. Each of us has his or her own holidays; birthdays, and wedding anniversaries, and so on, but on the national holidays we all get together in our celebration.

The coming holiday is peculiarly one for rejoicing for it is the day on which we give thanks to the Creator for the blessings which he has showered on us. It is a time when, remembering our country's greatness, and the prosperity with which we are blessed, we also remember that it all depends on a power above our own, and that thanks for all these things are due to Him.

The day is also one of unselfish joy in the blessings of others. It may be that to you or me has come sorrow and unhappiness during the year, still, because of blessings that have fallen on the nation and because our neighors are mostly happy and prosperous, we should take that day for thanksgiving for the blessing of us all.

It is needless to name over the things for which we ould be thankful this year. The man who does not know them of himself will be no more likely to be thankful ... then they are named to him, and those who do see the blessings would waste time in reading about them. But one thing we should all be sure of —none of us sees all the blessings that have come to us, nor knows of all dangers that have been averted. What seems a thing to be regretted may turn out one of the best things that ever happened, and where the roads seem to have run smoothest we may have been on the edge of the steepest cliffs, from which we barely escaped. So our thankfulness should not depend on the blessings that we see alone, but we should give thanks for the unseen, unknown mercies. It is when we do this, when we give praise for God's goodness to us without asking that we be shown every part of it, that we have the truest and best Thanksgiving Day.

Harrison Venire Challenged-Ground Court .- Good Fight Made.

The present trial of Caleb Fowers for the murder of Goebel seems likely to be more sensational than any of the other three, Ills lawyers are fighting every step of the way with the greatest ability, and, if they do not win, have already made it eertain that they will be able to appeal the case to the Supreme Court of the United States, which made such severe comments on the Kentucky methods of justice when a single point in the e ececaso came before it over a year The first advantage galued was in forcing the Commonwealth to show Its hand and answer ready for trial, in splie of absence of witnesses. Another notable victory was scored when the defense succeeded over the vigorous objection of the State's attorney in helng allowed to make an avowal, with written statements of witnesses. In support of the plea of abatement and bar to the indictment containing a copy of Gov. Taylor's pardon to l'owers. This is the first time that this pardon has been made a part of the record and the avowal accompanled by this exhibit will be a strong bulwark for the defense, if the case is appealed to a higher court. The bill of exceptions filed by the defense was another strong spike driven home by

The great fight so far has been over the selection of a jury, and it is in this that l'owers' lawyers have made their strongest points. They lost their fight to have a jury summoued from Fayette County, and it was ordered drawn from Harrison County, a stronghold of thoebel Democrats. l'owers objected to this, on tho ground that an attempt would be made to inject politics into the jury, and Mr. Wilson, his lawyer, made a strong plea that the sheriff be instructed to sammon a venire haif of which should be Republicans. This plea the judge denled, out at the same time he was so atrongly affected by it that he warned the sheriff that if it should be shown that the panel was not fairly selected he would set aside the order, and direct that a new venire be anm-

The sheriff and his deputies brought in the first hundred men of the panel and after a considerable time spent in examination five jurors were chosen by Saturday.

Then on Monday Powers' lawyers aprang their great motion. This is that the entire Harrison County venire, including the jurors already releeted be dismissed, on the ground that they were not fairly chosen, and How very glad they were they had that there was political blas shown if l'owers succeeds in proving the charges in his affidavit and having a The early moonlight silvered all the hill t jury called from Favette County he will have won a hard fought victory.

MONEYTALKS What Is the Capital of a Bank? How doss the Capital protect You?

The money a bank holds comes from two sources. First, there is its own money, its Capital, which belongs to the bank. Then there is the money which has been deposited with tho Bank for safe-keeping, which belongs to the Depositors, and is subject to their order at all times.

But what is the capital of a Bank? Simply this. The Bank Iteslf must have Capital, or money of its own, before the law will allow it to do business. This money, the Capital of the Bank, is furnished by a large number of people who are called stock-holders These people are the hank, and the money they put in is the Bank's Cap-

This money which the stockholders put ln cannot be drawn out, but must he held hy the Bank as a guarantee to the depositors that their money, which they have left in the Bank for safe-keeping, will be pald to them when they call for lt.

Thus the Capital, which cannot be drawn out, and the surplus (which will be explained in next week's money talk) form a fund standing between the depositors and any possible shrinkage in the value of the securltles held by tho bank.

For example, the Capital of the Berea Bank and Trust Company is fifty thousand dollars, and the surplus is ten thousand dollars more, or sixty thousand deliara in all, and any possihle loss which the Bank may suffer must come out of this fund, and not out of the money belonging to the depositors. In other words, the stockholders, who are the Bank, would have to lose all of sixty thousand dollars before any depositor could lose

It was the apartment we had first entered; and it bore unmistakable madam is his nurse and I am his stances make it impossible that his aigns of having been minutely ranracked. A large empire desk had been pried open. Papers had heen abstracted from the drawers and pigeonholes; they lay about in confusion. In more than one place the earpet had been torn up at the edges.

As I peered cautlously within, Dr. Starva was lowering the Venetian blind of another window. Evidently they were searching the room with the knowledge that an article of value was hidden there.

I heard Madame de Varnier cry out excitedly. A packet, concenled hetween the slats of a Venetian hlind, had fsilen to the floor.

Without a doubt it was for this packet of papers that they had been searching. Madamo de Varnier tore the envelope in feverish haste. She scanned the centents of the papers with intense eagerness, Dr. Starva looking over her shoulder. As they read, their faces expressed disappelntment and chagrin. Dr. Starva questioned Madame de Varnier repeatedly. She put asido his fierce inquirles with impatience.

And new I made a second discovery. I thought I understood the meaning of this extraordinary plot in coming to the hetel at Vitznau. I had guessed long since that I hore a sufficiently striking resemblance to Sir Mortimer Brett to deceive at least the first easual glance. Otherwise, why tho amazement of the Bretts and Madame de Varnier in first seeing me? How else explain the events of the night? They had drugged me, or attempted to do se, that I might be oblivious to inconvenient inquiries or greetings. The hat and cleak of Sir Mortimer, which Dr. Starva had procured in some mnnner, were unusual enough in character to be readily rec ognized by the servants of the hotel. Sir Mertlmer was known to he ill, and my condition would arouse no suspicion.

All the facts as I swiftly reviewed them fitted neatly. The inference was unmistakable:

This was the suite of Sir Mortimer Brett. They had come for the packet of papers they were now reading. The presence of Sir Mortlmer Brett with them had gained them ready admission to his rooms.

And new that they had found the papers?

Had I served my purpose? Was the invitation to Madamo do Varnier's chnteau a ruse eleverly planned simply to hring me to this hotel as Sir Mortlmer?

In that ease I must he alert that they did not slip through my hands, leaving me here in Sir Mertlmer's rooms to explain my predlenment on the morrow as hest I might.

Or was this the prelude to other adventures even more exciting? Was the game only just hegun?

Still I watched them intently, while these peridexing questions demanded producing his pockethook. an answer. They had finished the pnpers now. Dr. Starva was seated in sullen gleom: Madame de Varnler glided to and fro in angry indecision.

A loud knock on the door opening into the hall startled mo almost as much as themselves. Madame de Vnraler thrust the papers into the bosom of her dress; then, while Dr. Stnrva nt is ill, very ill. "Do you not see that he is in no condition to he disturbed to-night?" she asked indignantly.

For the first time Captain Forhes hesitated. He placed one sunburned hand on his breast as if to guard lealously the dispatches he bore. That he should hesitate at all seemed to me Incredible. But Captain Ferbes seemed n fair example of that type of Englishman who performs his duty with the stubbernness and ebstinacy of a fool as well as a hero. Chance often determines which of the two characters he shall assume. It is true he had not the remotest susplelun that I was not Sir Mortlmer. Hut surely he must see that I was in the power of these adventurers.

All my fears reached a ellmax, when, looking steadily at me a moment, he turned to the others:

"I must speak to Sir Mortimer alone.'

I saw Starva grasp the revolver concealed beneath bls coat. Madaine de Varnier sileneed the protests on his lips with a meaning ginnee. She realized the uselessness of further resist-

My first impulse was to put an er ! to this faree. But again I hesite! ... They were listening outside that door; every suspleion was alert, the slightest enuse would fan the suspleion to

And then what? I should have made myself ridiculeus to no purpows. I had gone far in my reckless venture -too far to risk all by attempting to warn Captain Forbes at this emelal moment. His brain worked too slowly -he was too deficient in imagination -too much lacking in subtlety and finesse. I refused-recklessly, if you will, but deliberately-to risk the suceess of my scheme by drumming into the dull hrnin of Captain Ferhes the true state of affairs. It would have taken him a good quarter of an hour to grasp merely the facts. Mixed Marriage Means Suicide to the Jem

By CHARLES FLEISCHER. Noted Jewish Rabbi of Boston.

Everywhere the fusing and blending of the human race is retarded by social prejudices and conventions which prevent the free and natural intermingling of all human elements in proportion to degree of intercourse and amount of opportunity.

Only recently Pope Pius has interpreted more stringently the churchly laws governing the marriage of Catholie and non-Catholie. With Jews even more than with Catholics the instinct of self-preservation of a group plainly in the minority, added to a dis-tinetive zeal for their faith, operates strongly against mixed marriages, so that, almost unanimously, liberal and orthodox Jews, officially, at least, are opposed to the existing tendency.

The more refusal of most rabbis to officiate at such marriages will never prevent one of them. Whatever the future of such unions and however much the rabbi may be opposed to them, whenever the marriage is unalterably decided upon, it would seem plainly wiser to give the parties the sympathy and sanctity of religion than to withhold these and thus to estrange still farther from the faith those daring souls, who defy eustom, convention, prejudice and possible ostracism, in order to prove the supremacy of love.

Are mixed marriages a failure? Yes, most likely. But probably only a little more frequently than other marriages. Who that knows the situation will dare to say that, from any ideal viewpoint, marriage is conspicuous as the most social institution? How many husbands and wives are boon companions, comrades, united in that eternal friendship which marriage at its best should be?

But that's another story. Mixed marriage is dangerous between members of any group that have not learned to respect and love one another. As all of one's environment enters into one's marital relatiouship, it is plain that for Jew and non-Jew, Catholic and Protestaut and so on all along the line of surviving social antagonisms, mixture of these groups in marriage would be better delayed until their mutual attitude has changed into permanent friendliness and their intercourse has become as natural with one another as it is among themselves.

That is the vanishing point of the problem of mixed marriage. But, until then, all those who make this daugerous experiment simply import into their particular case another of the many factors which normally make successful marriage so difficult and rare an achievement.

For the Jew, the problem of mixed marriages is complicated still further by its plain application to his very existence as a separate social fact and the continuance of his religious career. For him the increase of mixed marriage can mean only a slow suicide, a reabsorption into the ocean of humanity, the attainment of his Nirvana, for which he had hoped only on the day of the completion of his mission, when a united human brotherhood would acknowledge the universal fatherhood of a just and loving God.

Society and the Smart Sets

By ALFRED SUTRO. Dramatist.

In America the smart set is imitating the Eng-

It is rather difficult to know what is the aim of enjoy themselves. They some thing they can do. They are not idle; no, you can't call them that; they are just rich. Personally, to me, the young man who has nothing suitable color. Those strings are rua to do but shoot and ride, and go in for athleties, don't you know, is not through the casing in the ordinary interesting. He articulates nothing, he avoids thinking so viciously.

But society is not necessarily wicked? It is worse than that; I am at all uncommon about it. The ribafraid it is stupid. My principal commandment is, "Thou shalt not be bon should be tled together at the dull." You ean't always live up to it, but at least cultivate the idea as

Society in America is not based on a peerage, but upon a greed for Money opens any door, anywhere in the world. Society with the biggest S is a society with the biggest purse. Since the middle classes have become so rich in England there is really no objection to them. There never ought to have been at any time, I suppose, but, now that they ean buy automobiles, and carriages, and town houses, and shooting boxes, and all that sort of thing, they mingle with the smart set quite inoffen-

Social ambition is only another means to get rich. The interesting difference between English society and American society is its complete reversal of incentive. In England the man annihilates his past if he can, by seeking a title that will excuse it in the eyes of the smart world. In America there is no significance to anything but a fortune, an elastic where the srmy mnaeuvers are being ever devouring instinct for power. The millionaire must go on till lie is a billionaire, or be swept off his feet. He can't escape, and he has begun his struggle for power; and, of course, in this tremendous fight for charge the enemy and annihilate him supremacy in business the human elements of his life become dwarfed, yet threatening his peace of mind at any moment.

In the rush for power, in the fearful absorption of the millionaire's struggle to keep on his feet, he neglects his wife. I have seen her type in Paris. She is alone, she married excusably enough no doubt for ideals that all his money cannot supply. He is not lacking in them, nor ilid he intend to avoid them, but what time is there for love, for human consider- to the depth of half an Inch. The ation, in a great fight for power?

EST OF CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

May Be Easily Fashioned Into Innumerable Pretty and Useful Article That Will Be Appreclated,

In all the wide range of Christmas present making there is nothing that offers so many opportunities as the pretty piece of ribbon found on the remnant counters of the stores. They are comparatively inexpensive, and the lagenious woman easily fashions from them many a dainty and attructivo article of persoasi adornment or home decoration that will be all the more appreciated for the reasoa that it represents her work more than it does her pocketbook. Wo give here suggestions for a number of pretty articles that may be made from ribboa of different colors and

It is far easier to contrive smart little knick-knacks from the wide ribbons than it is to tura to account those of parrower make. This is in great measure due to the readiness with which they may be converted lato charming little bags for holding handkerchlef and purse, or for work, and other odds and ends. One of the most uncommoa models that requires only a yard of ribbon five and a haif to six inches wide is the double bag showa In the lilustration.

The bag from which our picture was taken was made of an exceedingly handsome ribbon of striped design. Heliotrope, white and black veivet bands were effectively combined. A thinner kind of ribbon, such as a chine taffetas, could well be chosen, and might well be sought out because it is generally to be had la specially beautiful shadowy designs, with plain colored stripes running down the edges. The few laches of ribboa that are left free must be folded in so as to form two hems, each must do something, and nearly two laches and three quarters that is the least tire in leagth and having a half-inch wide easing ia each to hold the drawstrings of half-inch ribboa of some way, the heading of the bag being considered as if there were actiling eads into a crisp bow, which can be held in place with a few stitches bidden away in the center.

Dolls are often made to serve as by no means a bad plan to buy one of these pinholders by way of a paltern nad, for a sale of work. to dress up several of them with ribbons of different colors. The dolls, small china ones, with long falr halr, can be purchased for n few cents each. For the outer part of the case, half a yard of satin ribbon about two laches wide is required. For using up odd lengths of ribbon about half an inch wide there are few things more convenient than is the letter or card holder. A piece of very firm enreboard is required for the foundation, if this is not at hand, possibly two thinner pieces are to he had. They will answer as well if they are firmly gumined together. DOES IT PAY?

Wisdom of Extracting Sections from Hive Called lato Question.

As a rule, this question will have to be answered in the negative. It is too much fussing for the little gain derived from the operation. However, there are exceptional cases when it is not only desirable but in a small way

During the many years of my beekeeping conditions have occasionally been such that I felt the desire to extruct sections, writes ti. C. Greiner in Heo Culture; but as I thought it could not be done without running too much risk of bresking the cousts from the wood, and, hesides, not having any convenient rig to do the job in a satisfactory way, I have never, natil lately, made the attempt. I have always let unfinished sections which I reserved for the bees to help themselves. This tage that the colonies that don't need apparently auspicious. any feeding get it all, or acarly all. while those that are sorely in need of piores get very little if aay.

We may take if for granted that ao bee-keeper would even think of extracting fluished sections, or even such unfinished sections as could be profitably disposed of as chuak honey, or used otherwise to advnatage. But some seasons produce a certain kind of caffaished sections that seemed to be made for the extractor. According to the peculiarities of different seasons' honey flows, we have two distinct types of unfinished sections. One kind is partly built out, some not larger than the laride of a hand, but all drawn out, filled with boney, and every cell capped over, while the other is all built and drawn out, filled more or less with honey, but little, if any, capped. The past season produced in this locality, with The exception of very little fialshed honey (where buitcombs had been supplied) the latter

During the five days of white-clover hoacy flow, lasting from the 26th until the 30th of Juae, honey was guthered in such quantities that the combbuilders had all they could do to furnish storage for the incomiag nectar: and when the combs were built and drawn out they were also fliled with hoaey, and about ready to be capped, Just then the honey-flow ceased; and so complete was the following failure that not the least progress was made ia sections for the remainder of the season, aithough enough was guthered most of the time for been to live on and to store a little in the brood chamber. This explains why the largest share of our crop consisted of just such unfinished sections as could be extracted with very little trouble; and as extracted honey was so very scarce, the little that those sections contained looked big in my eyes, which induced me to try the extractor.

As I said before, I had no convenient way to extract sectiona; but being anxious to try the experiment, a few miautes' work solved the problem.

The accompanying drawing, Fig. 1, represents a little adjustable shelf that is suspended by wire hooks late the upper part of the extractor-basket, as shown at Fig. 2. It is made of halffach lumber and fits loosely into the comb-basket. The dotted linea show the position of the wires on the under side of the shelf, where they are fasteaed by two little staples clinched above. The shelf should not be hung too low. If the sections project shove is an application of melted lard and the basket enough for a hold, it will make it all the more convenient. If we use the precaution of reversing the basket wice, or, in other words, build new ones. They will then bo If we reverse the basket after part of the contenta is thrown out from one side by moderato apeed, before trying to make a clean aweep, it is almost impossible to deinch the combs from the wood or even bead them out of shape, if they are rensonably fustened to the

it seems characteristic of many f our successful poultry plants tbni their beginnings were not attended with magaificence. The original buildings were not fine examples of poultry architecture. The owners did not deem them fit to illustrate their first annoal catningues. Hut these pinats have developed fato our now succeasful poultry farms. In the yards of alaay a faacier with a national reputation one can find houses of a type that have never been portrayed in our journals as admirable. They are frequently "made overa" from some unused building or some old pieces of scrsp lumber throwa together and made habitable by the use of tar paper and rags. Yet these houses sufficed to shelter tho fowis placed therein, and what the breeder lacked in comfortable quarters he made up in palastaking care. As time passed and profit was made many of theso houses have been abandoned or re coastructed, but aonio are left and on almost every poultry farm are still in use, standing as a proof that expeasive houses and fixtures are not requisites of a good beginning in poultry culture. Nowhere do we find as up-to-date, well constructed, even elegant poultry houses as on the abandoaed plaat, where moacy was spparently not lacking when tho original buildings were erected. Poultry houses are so frequently portrayed with elaborate descriptions of the roosts, aesting boxes, feed troughs, grit and heef acrap receptacies, that one may forget that a house is only so much room enclosed within tight walls, merely so much space, protected from the elements, says the Northwestern Agriculturist. Economy is usually associated in our minds with inconvenience. The person desiring to build cheap poultry houses must expect to do without poultry house luxuries. Our best styles of houses consider the confort of both the fewis and attendants, but our cheap houses 'consider only that my bees do the extracting-that is, any of the fowls, sad leave that of the atteadaat to take care of itself. Comment and Suggestive Thought. The Samson Stories .- It seems strange, at first sight, that three chapters of the Bible should be given to the story of such a maa as Samsoagreat, strong, jovial, good-natured. ready to fight, equally ready to play rough jokes and utter witty saylags, with an aniaiai nature overshadowing The spiritual. It is still more strange that in the roll-call of beroes of the faith in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, Sumson should be named with Abraham, Gideon, and David, aaroag these "who through faith subdued klagdoms, wrought righteousness, obtalaed promises, stopped the moutha of lions.

3. The consecration of Samson was through the Nazirite vow, which required (Num. 6: 2-6) total abstinence from grapes, wine, and all intoxicating liquors; that the bair should go uncut; and that all contamination with desd bodies he avoided. It was usually a temporary vow, but Samson and John the Haptist were perpetual Nuzirites. The meaning of the vow was probably "entire consecration to

Expenses, Regulations, Opening Days.

Berea College is not a money-making inatitution. All the money received from students is paid out for their benefit, and the School expends on an average upon each student about fifty dollars a year more than be pays in. This great deficit is made up by the gifts of Christian and patriotic people who are supporting Berea in order that it may train young men and women for lives of usefulness.

OUR SCHOOL IS LIKE A FAMILY, with careful ragulations to protect the character and reputation of the young peopla. Our etudenta come from the best families and are earnest to do wall and improve. For any who may be sick the College provides doctor and nursa without extra charge.

All except those with parents in Berea live in College buildings, and assist in work of boarding hall, farm and shops, receiving valuable traintng, and getting pay according to the value of their labor. Except in win. ter it is expected that all will have a chance to earn as much as 35 centa a week. Some who need to earn more may, by writing to the Secretary before coming, secure extra employment so as to eurn from 60 cents to one dollar a week,

PERSONAL EXPENSES for clothing, laundry, postage, books, etc., vary with different people. Berea favors plain clothing. Our citmate to the heat, but as students must attend classes regardless of the weather, warm wraps and underclothing, umbrellas and oversboes, are necessary. The Co-operative Store furnishes books, tollet articles, work uniforms, umbrelias and other necessary articles at cost.

LIVING EXPENSES are really below cost. The College asks no rent for the fine hulidings in which atudents live, charging only enough room rent to pay for cleaning, repairs, fuel, lights, and washing of bedding and towels. For table board, without coffae or axtraa, $1.35 a week in the fall, and $1.50 in winter. For room, furnished, fuel, lights, wash ing of hedding, 40 cents a week in fall and apring, 50 cents in winter, SCHOOL FEES are two. First a "Dollar Deposit," as guarantee for return of room key, library books, etc. This is pahl but once, and is returned when the student denarts.

Second an "incidental Fea" to help on expenses for oare of school buildings, hospital library, etc. (Students pay nothing for tuition or services of teachers-all our instruction is a free gift). The incidental Fee for most students is $5 00 a term ($400 in lower Model Schools, $600 in courses with Latin, and $7.00 in Collegiate courses).

Powers Again Claims Immunity From Prosecution.

Georgotown, Ky.-The prosecution in the Powers case answered ready at republicans reside the opening of court. Powers' attorney, W. C. Owens, handlag to Judge Morris the pardon issued to Powers Farmer Killed and Thrown into Lake, by W. S. Taylor while he was governor, said: "Wo wish to offer a plea in abatement." The noted paper was then passed over to the attorneys for the commonwealth for examination. The pardon was found on Powers when he was arrested at Lexington in April, 1900, while trying to escape from Frankfort in soldiers' clothes. This pardon has been offered at every trial and the courts have held that Taylor was not governor, defacto or dejure, at the time, because his right to the seat was under contest.

Judge Morris overruled the motion. The defense, however, scored a point In securing admission to make avownl of the pardon, thus getting that document in the records over the emphatle objection of the prosecution, which was allowed to give exceptions.

Mrs. Stetson's Revolt

By JOHN BARTON OXFORD.

[Copyright, 1905, by John ttarton Oxford.] T was commonly said in Centervale that old John Stetson held the strings of his own purse and "kep" a pretty tight holt on 'em too." This kernel of truth from the chaff of ing over in her mind as she darned socks under the yellow light of an an-

"I want to raflie," she said simply. "How much does it cost?"

"Twenty cents for three throwa," said Itabb.

Mrs. Stetson passed over the change, Much might be written of her experience in that dingy room-of how she threw to the line of her cush emphal (60 cents); of how one of the Dayton beys showed her how to count the dice and as he bent above them siyly turned them over to count higher. HOW CHINA CELEBRATES.

Thunkagiving llay in the Celestial Kingdom.

In thinn at the beginning of whiter a thanksgiving festival is held at which the delties are especially thruked for the preservation of life and health during the preceding twelve months. Offerlags are pre-ented on the family aims, and the ceremony is brought to a close by a grand dinner at which all members of the family can partake. The feasting and rejoicings are kept up for some days and extend to the last night of the year. On that evening it is a common practico in some parts of the country for boys to era aloud in the atreet. "Mateou" "I sell my folly"-in order that they may be wiser the pext year.

Every year on the filteenth day of the first moon the emperor of t'hina goes in great state to a certain field, accompanied by the chief officers of his household, and prestrates himself, pronounces a prayer invoking the bless-Ing of the Great Being. Then as high priest of the empire he sacrities a lullock to heaven as the fountain of all good. While the victim is being offered, a glow drawn by a pair of highly ornamented oxen is brought to the emperer, who throws aside his imperial robe, inya bold of the plow handies and opens several furrows. The principal mandarins follow his example, and the festival, which is really a species of thanks in advance for good harvests, ends with a distribution of clothes and money to the poor .-Cieveland Plain Dealer.
